

Record Paper 5: What factors influence national health research agendas in developing countries?

Organization: COHRED Description: Health research in many developing countries faces two major challenges: a lack of clarity on national health research priorities; and the undue influence of international health research programmes, that fail to take account of these health research needs.

ISBN: 92 9226 010 3

Download: English version